From the Chairman of the Board and President

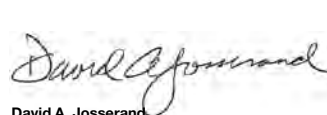

Last year we noted that the American Heart Association achieved key metrics of our 2010 strategic goal two years early. We exceeded a 25 percent reduction in mortality goals for coronary heart disease and stroke. Since then we haven't rested in our fight against heart disease.

This year the board made a historic decision to adopt a new goal: By 2020, to improve the cardiovascular health of all Americans by 20 percent while reducing deaths from cardiovascular diseases and stroke by 20 percent.

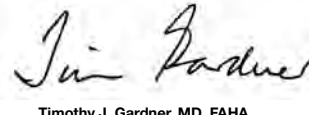

The new goal reflects the association's new focus on improving health and quality of life. We've moved from a more reactive strategy (managing risk by controlling risk factors) to a more proactive one (preventing risk by helping people live healthier lives).

In June, the U.S. Senate passed the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, landmark legislation to give the Food and Drug Administration the authority to regulate tobacco. For many years, the American Heart Association worked tirelessly to move this important bill through Congress. Passage of this bill is a courageous step to save lives and ensure a healthier future for all Americans.

We continue to advance initiatives targeted to those at risk, including women, children and African Americans. From advocacy to quality initiatives, you can read more about these accomplishments and many others on the pages that follow.

From the CEO

Do not wait for leaders; do it alone, person to person.
—Mother Teresa

Take a moment to think about how one person can make an Extraordinary Impact. Perhaps it's by sharing a passion for healthy living, or making a scientific discovery that saves thousands or advocating for a law that helps millions.

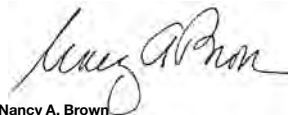

This Annual Report highlights several people who are making such differences, but our association contains tens of thousands of them. These extraordinary people, our volunteers, infuse our organization with energy. They're the reason recent research shows that the public sees us as having an "extraordinary impact."

I am proud of what the American Heart Association has accomplished in a challenging economy. Even in tough times, our volunteers and supporters are focusing on building healthier lives, free of cardiovascular diseases and stroke.

We continue to embrace bold, aggressive goals to improve the cardiovascular health of all Americans.

The association worked on the Stimulus Plan bill to ensure that health information technology is readily available to improve the care delivery system. And we're working tirelessly to have a strong voice in the healthcare debate. We know we must present the patient's point of view to members of Congress as they debate the future of our healthcare system.

We've also developed a volunteer and staff group focused on building our vision for volunteerism. Our goal is to make sure that the American Heart Association's work touches even more lives as we move into the next decade.

Remarkable Achievements

In addition to the important accomplishments noted in these letters, this fiscal year the American Heart Association also:

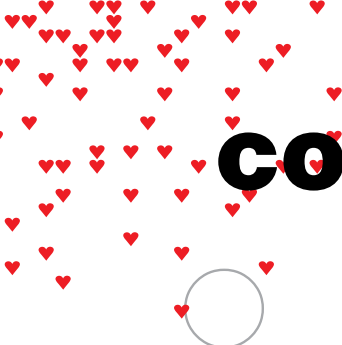

Increased its Advocacy outreach. Our Advocacy Coordinating Committee and advocacy staff in Washington played a key role in supporting congressional plans for healthcare reform. Manuscripts on the "Principles for Health Care Reform" as well as "Defining Comparative Effectiveness Research" were published and shared with Members of Congress and congressional health policy staff.

Adopted the new Strategic Plan of the Research Committee. The association's research portfolio has been adjusted to include greater support for meritorious clinical and population health research.

Completed the Strategic Plan from the International Committee. We've identified many ways the association can have a global impact on cardiovascular health and prevention.

Grew Mission: Lifeline™, our national program to improve emergency treatment for victims of STEMI, the most serious kind of heart attack. The program, which we launched last year, involves state health planners, EMS providers (including EMTs and ER staff) and hospital-based cardiologists. Mission: Lifeline is making a strong impact on healthcare protocol—and saving lives.

Yuki Kotani

Go Red For Women is the American Heart Association's campaign to teach women to turn personal choices into lifesaving actions. Highlights from the year include:

- Raising awareness that heart disease is the No. 1 killer of women. On National Wear Red Day (Feb. 6), more than 500 buildings and landmarks were lit in red—from San Francisco cable cars to the Empire State Building. Thousands of people wore red, while about 17,000 companies supported women's fight against heart disease.
- Reaching new audiences with the premiere of "Go Red For Women presents—Untold Stories of the Heart" on NBC in September 2008. The show reached viewers in over 86 markets.
- Targeting major media to make an impact. Go Red kicked off American Heart Month at the Super Bowl with celebrity spokesperson David Tyree, formerly of the New York Giants, whose mother died of heart disease. Celebrity supporter Andie MacDowell and Dr. Nieca Goldberg participated in more than 35 interviews.
- Increasing our presence in social media by launching a Facebook fan page and a Wear Red Day event invitation, where over 141,000 confirmed their attendance. More than 30,000 women have engaged in our community at GoRedForWomen.org.
- Giving more women tools to make changes with the Go Red BetterU online lifestyle change program. Celebrity spokesperson Jennie Garth shared how her family has been affected by heart disease.

Since joining Go Red For Women, 54 percent of registrants have exercised more frequently, 43 percent had their cholesterol checked and 61 percent modified their diet to include healthy food.

Our other causes also inspired people to make changes for the better:

Start!

Start!, our movement to get people to walk more, eat well and live longer, is making an impact. We've partnered with the American Council on Exercise to develop the first-ever American Heart Association online walking plans, which were made available on National Start! Walking Day (April 8).

Start! conducted a survey to understand the effects of the sagging economy on individuals' health. The survey results were featured in a Parade Magazine cover story in May 2009. The story was also featured on ABC's World News Tonight with Charles Gibson as well as in USA Today.

Our new Web site, www.StartWalkingNow.org, registered more than 50,000 people in the first few months, helping participants set fitness goals and live healthier lives.

Also, more than 1,000 companies were recognized as Start! Fit-Friendly.

Alliance for a Healthier Generation

We've remained steadfast in our fight against childhood obesity through the Alliance for a Healthier Generation, our partnership with the William J. Clinton Foundation. By collaborating with providers, industry and other stakeholder groups, the Alliance Healthcare Initiative has aligned insurance plans so that there is coverage for the essential obesity-related care that physicians and dietitians provide to children. The goal is for 25 percent of overweight children (about 6.2 million) to have access within the first three years.

The empowerME Kids' Movement is inspiring kids to make healthy behavior changes. Since the movement launched in 2006, more than 1.38 million kids have made a commitment to healthy eating and physical activity.

Power To End Stroke

Power To End Stroke continued to make strides in reaching African Americans with stroke prevention messages. See the American Stroke Association section on page 6 for more information.

Yuki's story

The heart attacks kept coming—11 in 15 years. Hitoshi Kotani also had cardiomyopathy, an inflammation of the heart that was caused by a virus. Doctors told him he might have just a year to live.

When the 55-year-old businessman came to New York for a heart transplant in 2007, his daughter Yuki faced a difficult choice. “No matter what, I was going to be his caretaker,” she said. “The decision was whether I was going to be his daughter.”

Hitoshi had left his family and moved to Japan while his children were young. Yuki, now 25, felt abandoned. “My dad had no idea I was in so much pain—I had so much anger bottled up inside.” After he recovered from surgery, she shared her feelings.

As Hitoshi healed, his relationship with his daughter did too. Hitoshi reached out to Yuki and her siblings. There were apologies, then tears. Then Hitoshi started putting his family first.

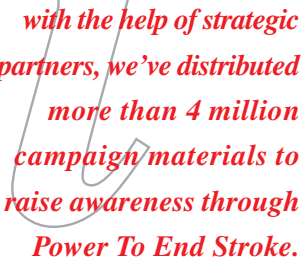

Since then, Hitoshi and Yuki discovered they both love art, a passion they’ve explored together at galleries. When Yuki showed her dad the landscapes and still-lives she’d painted, she learned he also loved to paint. She gave him a watercolor set so he might pick up his old hobby.

With Hitoshi’s support, Yuki co-founded a nonprofit to help provide temporary housing for heart patients. Yuki also spreads the word about the American Heart Association’s cause Go Red For Women. “Heart disease is the No. 1 killer of women, not breast cancer like most people think,” Yuki said. “Raising awareness is my passion. It was inspired by my experience with my dad—and that touches him.”

extraordinary impact american stroke association with the help of strategic partners, we've distributed more than 4 million campaign materials to raise awareness through Power To End Stroke.

The American Stroke Association is reducing the devastating impact of stroke, the No. 3 killer in the United States, by strategically influencing stroke care. It's also promoting stroke awareness in a campaign that touches thousands of lives. Last year we invested almost $157 million in stroke research and stroke-related programs.

State Stroke Systems Plan

The American Stroke Association's State Stroke System of Care helps ensure that patients have access to advanced treatment that deals with their urgent needs. It also addresses serious gaps in stroke systems by ensuring that staff working in EMS transport systems and hospitals are trained to recognize a stroke.

We're collaborating with state groups to assess and reduce gaps. This initiative is having a tremendous impact. For example:

- 201 million people, or 66 percent of the U.S. population, now live within 30 miles of a Get With The Guidelines-Stroke hospital, giving them timely access to acute stroke treatment;
- 50 states have stroke prevention on the public policy agenda; and
- 33 states have enhanced 9-1-1 coverage for at least 90 percent of their population.

Medicare Stroke Rehabilitation

The American Stroke Association continues to work to protect Medicare stroke patients. For 2009, Medicare Part B beneficiaries were limited to a $1,840 annual therapy cap on combined outpatient physical therapy and speech therapy and a separate $1,840 cap on outpatient occupational therapy.

The American Stroke Association and other organizations have worked with Congress to allow some Medicare patients to get an exception to the caps. Congress extended this "exceptions process" through Dec. 30, 2009. Stroke qualifies for an automatic exception, provided that the additional therapy services are medically necessary.

Power To End Stroke

Many people don't seek prompt treatment because they don't know the signs and symptom of stroke. With the help of strategic partners, we've distributed more than 4 million campaign materials to raise awareness through Power To End Stroke.

More than 518,000 people have enrolled in the movement and more than 20,000 Power Ambassadors (business leaders, legislators, healthcare professionals, leaders of faith-based organizations and celebrities/entertainers/athletes) speak passionately against stroke. When they hear the message, many people are taking action. After participating in Power To End Stroke:

- 61 percent got their blood pressure checked;
- 54 percent got their cholesterol checked; and
- 50 percent started walking or exercising.

A 13-city gospel tour sang the praises of taking action. About 25,000 individuals received cardiovascular information through gospel music and praise dance. As a part of the tour, stroke screenings were conducted.

The Power Awards in Atlanta in June honored 22 Ambassadors for their efforts to reach African Americans. They included Elder Bernice King, daughter of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Coretta Scott King; Kenny Lattimore and Chanté Moore (husband and wife) gospel, jazz and R&B singers; and Dr. Bobby Jones, gospel artist. Rani Whitfield, M.D., a family practitioner who is known as "Tha Hip Hop Doc," received the Legacy Award to honor his outstanding work as a Power To End Stroke Ambassador.

extraordinary impact

consumer & patient outreach

Millions of people are getting credible information to help them eat better, exercise more and take control of their heart health with our patient education resources.

Heart Hub & Heart360

We're reaching more than 30,000 new visitors a month online at HeartHub (hearthub.org), where users can access video clips, Podcasts, interactive trackers and tools to help manage their heart health.

From HeartHub, we're empowering patients and caregivers to understand and manage their health with Heart360 (heart360.org), which relaunched in October 2008. Users can set goals and track their blood pressure, cholesterol, weight, physical activity and blood glucose levels—and store the information in a free, secure Microsoft HealthVault account. Heart360 is one of the top three applications offered on Microsoft HealthVault. The site's functionality is also being used in research initiatives to understand how innovative tools can help patients achieve their goals.

The Heart Of Diabetes

Celebrity spokesperson Randy Jackson and Immediate Past President Dr. Dan Jones helped raise awareness about The Heart Of Diabetes. The program helps patients better manage their diabetes and decrease their risk of cardiovascular disease, the leading cause of death in people with type 2 diabetes.

At HeartOfDiabetes.org we launched My Diabetes Health Assessment. This interactive tool is helping patients learn their risk of having a heart attack or stroke in the next 10 years, discover the steps they can take to reduce their risk of developing cardiovascular disease and access personalized action plans that can help them lead a healthier lifestyle.

Patient Education

We distributed more than 5.4 million pieces of patient education information to patients, healthcare professionals, families and caregivers. Heart Insight and Stroke Connection magazines continue to bring authoritative, up-to-date heart and stroke information to more than half a million patients. And our patient Web sites are growing, receiving over 9 million unique visitors. In addition, we launched over 200 pages of online health content in Spanish, Vietnamese and Chinese.

Advertising Campaign

Our national advertising campaign about critical heart-health messages had its most successful year to date, generating more than 3 million customer engagements. The campaign was fully integrated with TV, radio, print and online advertising for the general public, including Spanish-speaking audiences.

In addition, our groundbreaking social media efforts with Facebook and custom online games helped us better engage and educate the public. And we added value to the campaign by negotiating bonus placements valued at more than $4.3 million.

Nutrition Education

The American Heart Association's heart-check mark is the most trusted icon on food packaging today—and it continues to resonate with health-conscious shoppers in the challenging economy. Our Food Certification program saw the number of participating companies rise. We have 110 companies and about 850 products, with exciting opportunities on the horizon.

Consumer Publications continues to develop books and information to help consumers achieve a heart-healthy lifestyle with delicious, nutritious meals. More than 1 million copies of the Healthy Soul Food and Go Red For Women magazine cookbooks were released earlier this year, many in mass market retail locations.

we distributed more than 5.4 million pieces of patient education information.

advocacy

i know that one lifestyle change can lead to another. Before you know it, you feel better about things that could happen in the future.

Kenny Taylor

Kenny Taylor is one of thousands of everyday activists who fervently urge lawmakers to pass lifesaving legislation.

Molly Nolan, who needed several surgeries to repair a congenital heart defect, inspires elected officials when she voices her hope for improved health outcomes. And long-time volunteer Connie Kerr talks passionately about the importance of heart health. In fact, her knowledge of warning signs helped her parents to get lifesaving treatment when they had heart events.

This year's You're the Cure Lobby Day, led by people like Kenny, Molly and Connie, was a tremendous success. Nearly 500 participants from all 50 states attended meetings on the Hill in Washington, D.C. to advocate for lifesaving legislation. And several thousand You're the Cure advocates sent more than 11,000 messages as part of a "virtual" Lobby Day effort, including more than 400 phone calls to congressional offices the day of the event.

Lack of access to quality healthcare has hindered efforts to fight cardiovascular diseases, as millions of uninsured and underinsured Americans face soaring healthcare costs. The American Heart Association is actively working with congressional leaders to reform the American healthcare system.

Congress has extended and expanded the Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP), thanks in part to the American Heart Association's strong support. This legislation ensures that low-income children, including those born with heart defects, have health insurance coverage.

Additional advocacy highlights include:

The Economic Stimulus Bill: The American Heart Association and its coalition partners were instrumental in generating congressional support for several health-related provisions in the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act.

These include:

- $10 billion in funding for the NIH to support medical research;
- $650 million for a Prevention and Wellness Fund; and
- $19 billion to spur the widespread adoption of health information technology.

The FDA Tobacco Bill: Nearly one-third of heart disease and stroke deaths are linked to tobacco use, the nation's leading preventable cause of death. After more than a decade of advocacy by the American Heart Association and our partner organizations, the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act was approved by Congress in June.

The bill grants the FDA authority over tobacco products and will help reduce tobacco-related illnesses including heart disease and stroke. The American Heart Association will serve as a resource to the FDA as it develops regulations to implement the law.

Improving Nutrition and Preventing Obesity: We're working with Congress to reauthorize the Child Nutrition Programs, which set standards for school meals. We're also working to pass the Fitness Integrated with Teaching Kids Act to hold schools accountable for providing high-quality physical education.

State Advocacy: Momentum for increasing state cigarette excise taxes continues to grow. We met our 2010 tobacco tax goal early when Arkansas Gov. Mike Bebee signed into law a 56-cent cigarette tax increase in February. Tax increases have been proven to significantly deter youth smoking. In addition, South Dakota, North Carolina and Wisconsin became the 25th, 26th and 27th smoke-free states.

Finally, Rhode Island passed the most comprehensive stroke systems of care legislation to date. It establishes a primary stroke center designation process based on The Joint Commission certification and ensures that all acute care hospitals develop protocols and participate in Get With The Guidelines—Stroke to help improve health outcomes for stroke patients.

Kenny's story

On their Mexican honeymoon, Kenny Taylor and his wife Lori had big plans, like swimming with dolphins. But four days into their trip, Kenny started having trouble breathing. "It was hard for me to climb stairs or even walk around." He stayed in bed and prayed he'd feel well enough to fly home.

Hurricane Ike had forced the couple to cancel their big wedding and settle for a small ceremony in Lori's mother's home. Now this!

Back home in Texas, Kenny got off the plane and went straight to the ER. He learned he had an enlarged heart caused by blood clots in his lungs. "I was scared for my life," Kenny said. "My wife and I were just getting started."

Kenny started taking heart medication, began walking two miles four days a week and changed his diet. Today he's eating fewer fried foods and more green vegetables. It hasn't been easy. "As you start to feel better, you go back to your old habits."

Kenny wanted to keep himself accountable and help others by lobbying for lifesaving legislation. Since becoming a You're The Cure advocate, he has testified at the Texas Legislature to promote physical education legislation and has shared his passion for healthy lifestyles with African-American groups.

Kenny also spoke in support of funding for the NIH (National Institutes of Health) at Lobby Day on Capitol Hill. "Learning about the funding that was awarded for heart disease research was amazing—I felt like I had a role in accomplishing that," he said. "From my experience with the American Heart Association, I know there are many ways I can make a difference."

Eric Olson, Ph.D.

Pioneers like Olson make discoveries that can save lives—and the American Heart Association’s research programs establish professional career paths, expand scientific knowledge and improve lives.

Visionary philanthropists such as Jon Holden DeHaan, Stevie and David Spina, and the trustees of the Bugher Foundation make these scientific advances possible. Through the AHA—Jon Holden DeHaan Foundation Cardiac Myogenesis Research Centers Program, grants have been awarded to a network of centers at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center, Dallas, headed by Olson, plus the University of Pennsylvania (Center Director: Jonathan Epstein, MD) and the University of Minnesota (Center Director: Doris Taylor, PhD).

The Jon Holden DeHaan Foundation has a long history of funding American Heart Association cardiovascular research. With the contribution to the Myogenesis Centers and other AHA awards, the foundation has donated $5 million to date.

Four Outcomes Research Centers Awarded

The Pharmaceutical Roundtable (PRT) is a strategic coalition of 10 leading pharmaceutical companies supporting the association’s mission. Since 1988, this group has provided more than $55 million to support our cardiovascular and stroke research program.

The American Heart Association awarded $14.5 million to form a network of four AHA Pharmaceutical Roundtable Outcomes Research Centers. In addition to $12.2 million in support from the PRT, the Outcomes Research Centers are also supported by a generous gift from American Heart Association national Board member David Spina and his wife, Stevie Spina.

Over the next four years, the centers will work together and conduct research to determine which factors lead to the greatest improvements in healthcare outcomes for heart disease and stroke patients. This will help stakeholders make informed practice and policy decisions.

The recipients are:

Duke University School of Medicine
(Center Director: Eric Peterson, MD, MPH)

Saint Luke’s Mid America Heart Institute and the University of Missouri-Kansas City (Center Directors: John Spertus, MD, MPH and David J. Cohen, MD, MSc)

Stanford University-Kaiser Permanente of Northern California
(Center Co-Directors: Mark Hlatky, MD and Alan S. Go, MD)

University of California, Los Angeles (Center Director: Barbara G. Vickrey, MD, MPH and Co-Director: Jeffrey L. Saver, MD)

Innovative Research Grant Program Launched

In July 2008, the American Heart Association Research Program launched the Innovative Research Grant (IRG) to support innovative, high-risk/high-reward research that could lead to critical discoveries or major advancements. Each two-year, $150,000 award was available to any faculty-/staff-level investigator. Over 480 applications were received.

The top 14 proposals shared an allocation of $2.1 million, and these projects got underway on Jan. 1, 2009. The funding for these awards came from a collaborative effort of the American Heart Association Strategic Initiatives Fund, the National Research Program and the research programs of the American Heart Association’s Founders, Mid-Atlantic, Great Rivers, Greater Southeast and Midwest affiliates.

In 2008–09, the association received more than 6,100 applications for funding through the National Research Program and the eight affiliate research programs. More than 1,000 new research awards were made, totaling about $132 million. To ensure a continued high-quality cardiovascular disease and stroke research pipeline, we awarded about two-thirds of our research dollars to early-career investigators. In 2008–09, that amounted to $100.8 million.

Eric's Story

Much of what is known about cardiac gene regulation can be traced to the pioneering work of Eric Olson, Ph.D.

“A major emphasis of my research is to understand how the heart works normally and how it malfunctions in disease,” said Olson, director of the AHA–Jon Holden DeHaan Foundation Cardiac Myogenesis Research Center at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas. “Discoveries in basic science serve as the foundation for medicine. We are optimistic that our research will lead to important medical breakthroughs in heart disease.”

The association, in partnership with the Jon Holden DeHaan Foundation, which provided critical support for this initiative, awarded funding to UT Southwestern, the University of Minnesota and the University of Pennsylvania. The goal is to speed the day when regenerating cardiac muscle cells can help improve outcomes for heart attack and heart failure patients.

“The American Heart Association has played a catalytic role in my career,” said Olson, who was supported by an American Heart Association fellowship, by association grants and by an Established Investigator Award.

Olson’s team has discovered networks of genes that orchestrate the formation of the heart and has shown how inherited genetic mutations cause congenital heart disease, a common birth defect.

“We hope to develop new strategies to repair the heart using small drug-like chemicals that can stimulate stem cells to become cardiac muscle cells,” Olson said. “We also intend to exploit a family of tiny RNA molecules, called microRNAs, which regulate many important processes in the heart, such as survival of heart muscle cells.”

Olson says that science inspires him like art or music does others. “The way in which each person pursues a scientific question reflects creativity, personality and imagination.”

quality initiatives • ecc professional education

we're giving healthcare professionals more opportunities for lifesaving training.

Quality Initiatives

The American Heart Association is saving lives by improving systems and care for heart and stroke patients.

Get With The Guidelines® is our quality improvement program that helps hospitals follow proven practices to improve outcomes for heart disease and stroke patients. More than 1,500 hospitals are participating in the program and more than 2 million patient records have been entered. Get With The Guidelines–Heart Failure saw significant progress through our collaboration with The Joint Commission on the Advanced Certification in Heart Failure.

Get With The Guidelines–Stroke has made an impact on more than 1 million stroke patients since its launch in 2003. The success of the program has helped shape the decisions of the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) related to stroke care. Beginning in 2010, hospitals submitting Medicare claims must let CMS know if they participate in a database registry for stroke care, such as GWTG–Stroke.

About 400,000 people a year suffer a STEMI (ST-segment elevation myocardial infarction), the kind of heart attack where a coronary artery is totally blocked so that the heart muscle beyond the blockage dies if the artery isn't opened in time. Mission: Lifeline™, our initiative to advance the systems of care for these patients, is working with local healthcare professionals to improve patients' outcomes. This requires Emergency Medical Systems and hospitals to agree on local plans for identifying, triaging and treating patients in a timely manner. Mission: Lifeline's goal is to ensure that the right equipment, training and processes are in place to make sure every patient has access to the best available care every time.

ECC

To support the efforts of Mission: Lifeline, Emergency Cardiovascular Care (ECC) launched three products focused on improving healthcare professionals' readiness to respond to STEMI patients: the STEMI

Provider Manual, the Electrocardiogram Acute Coronary Syndrome (ECG ACS) Ruler, and Learn:™ Rapid STEMI ID, an eLearning course.

ECC is also giving healthcare professionals more options for lifesaving training. We expanded our online platform by launching HeartCode ACLS Part 1 and HeartCode BLS Part 1. And Heartsaver Bloodborne Pathogens Online is training employees whose jobs may involve contact with blood and are subject to OSHA regulations.

In the area of stroke, Stroke Hospital-Based Care Online, Stroke Prehospital Care Online, and Acute Stroke Online are providing training on assessing, diagnosing, treating and managing stroke.

Consumers can now use "Pocket First Aid & CPR"—the American Heart Association's first application for the Apple iPhone. It features illustrations and videos covering CPR and first aid procedures.

Professional Education

Over 300,000 healthcare professionals are registered with the Professional Education Center (PEC), their source for CVD and stroke continuing education. It's the single location for professionals to maintain their continuing education history with the association. More than 192,000 healthcare professionals on the PEC have enrolled in the NIH Stroke Scale Course, which is critical to stroke assessment.

Sharing information is invaluable to medical professionals. More than 23,000 attended our annual Scientific Sessions, the world's premier forum for cardiovascular science presentations and discussions.

Our International Stroke Conference drew more than 4,300 attendees, including more than 3,400 medical professionals. Our State-Of-The-Art Stroke Nursing Symposium drew almost 900 nurse professionals. The association's specialty conferences also continue to flourish. The Arteriosclerosis, Thrombosis and Vascular Biology Conference attracted almost 1,000 attendees, making it our third-largest scientific conference.

Cultural Health Initiatives

It takes volunteers like Cordelia Clapp, a member of the Pawnee tribe of Oklahoma and a long-time association volunteer, to drive our outreach to diverse populations. Cordelia has made it her life mission to educate Native Americans about their risks for heart disease.

Thousands of volunteers help us cultivate and implement heart-health educational programs. Last year, more than 2,800 sites helped implement programs that touched the African-American and Hispanic/Latino populations. Our strategic alliances range from small community organizations that teach health workers heart-health information to national organizations like Delta Sigma Theta, whose chapters disseminate Power To End Stroke messages.

We're also reaching millions of at-risk Hispanics by partnering with Spanish-language media giant Univision. We have a microsite online at Univision.com and also are featured on a weekly health radio show. Every Saturday the "El Consultorio de la Doctora Eliza" radio program airs an American Heart Association segment.

In the Western States Affiliate, volunteer task forces for the Chinese and Philippino communities implemented educational programs in schools and community centers. They also worked to incorporate local groups into the Start! Heart Walk. And our awareness programs in the South Central Affiliate, with help from people like Cordelia, led to almost 5,000 Native Americans taking the Go Healthy or Go Red For Women pledge.

fund raising

I know that the money I raise helps save lives. My daughter wouldn't be here if it weren't for the American Heart Association.

Roe Bascunan

Individuals can make an extraordinary impact in so many ways—at work, while shopping and at American Heart Association events. Despite the economic downturn, companies and consumers continued their commitment to saving lives from heart disease and stroke.

In workplace giving, companies like UnitedHealth Group and American Airlines showed their support by adding the American Heart Association to their pledge cards. Shoppers showed their dedication at the registers at Ross, Jiffy Lube, Rite Aid and Walgreens with donations that yielded over $4.3 million. And at American Heart Association special events, donors continued to share their passion in meaningful ways to help us advance our mission.

Active volunteers and strong supporters are at the heart of what we do. The Howard and Sondra Bender family, who has been personally touched by heart disease, made a $1 million leadership gift to the 2010 Washington DC Heart Ball. Overall, almost 2,500 new donors gave through special appeals during these black-tie ball events.

Our Start! Heart Walk highlights the importance of physical activity while raising funds for our mission. This year 14 percent more people (over the prior year) stepped up to participate! Dallas and Chicago each raised more than $2.9 million. Overall, 21 events raised more than $1 million each, and 68 companies raised more than $100,000 each. Our top company, Oracle, raised $512,000 for the Boston Start! Heart Walk.

Jump Rope For Heart and Hoops For Heart continue to teach kids the importance of developing healthy habits while raising critical funds to help others, such as children affected by heart disease and stroke. Our programs recruited the most schools ever—more than 39,100 K–8 schools. We reached 3,500 new schools and 2 million participating students with this important learning opportunity.

Corporations continued their support as well. Through corporate sponsorships, lifesaving messages were shared in advertising, on signage and on point of sale materials to help shoppers in grocery stores make healthy lifestyle decisions. Consumer giants Ocean Spray and Campbell's committed $1.416 million and $1.875 million to our Go Red For Women movement.

We launched much-needed high blood pressure education and healthcare quality improvement initiatives, thanks to the support of Novartis, Medtronic, Merck/Schering-Plough and Pfizer, which provided $4.65 million. And a $1 million grant from the Medtronic Foundation will help us launch our first national campaign to teach more young people the lifesaving skill of CPR.

In the area of research, four centers of excellence focusing on outcomes research (see page 10) were funded by the American Heart Association's Pharmaceutical Roundtable and David and Stevie Spina.

Our Major Gift and Foundation program continues to grow, despite the difficult economy. This year marks the 25th anniversary of the relationship between the American Heart Association and the Bugher Foundation, which has generously and faithfully supported our groundbreaking research for the last 25 years. In that time, they have given $25.3 million for research and more than another half million for a stroke awareness campaign.

More highlights:

- Our online Memorial and Tribute program—as well as general online contributions—totalled $5 million, an increase of 5.8 percent over the prior year.
- More than 300,000 volunteers completed the “Dear Neighbor” residential neighborhood campaign, generating $13.7 million and raising awareness about the importance of heart health.
- The Kansas City Go Red For Women luncheon tripled its prior-year earnings to more than $900,000.
- In Planned Giving, we received five bequests of $1 million or more. While the average estate value declined, total Estate Settlement income still exceeded $75 million. And new gift commitments surpassed $120 million.

Natalia's story

At eight days old, tiny Natalia Bascunan stopped eating. Doctors thought she had meningitis and did a spinal tap. "Natalia flatlined and they had to intubate her," said her mother, Roe.

In the ER, Roe heard, "We have a baby in critical condition." Everyone was running and going crazy because my daughter wasn't breathing."

The little girl was in shock; she was dying.

Natalia had critical coarctation (narrowing) of the aorta and mild hypoplastic left heart syndrome. She was transferred to the neonatal unit, where her aorta was surgically opened.

"She stopped breathing again," Roe said. "They told me to call a priest." Roe and her husband Christian hugged and cried while the priest read the baby's last rites.

Miraculously, Natalia stabilized for a second surgery at 10 days old, on her dad's birthday.

The couple was terrified until the surgeon told them, "Your little baby is going to be just fine."

Today, Natalia, 8, is a strong-willed tomboy who loves flag football and visits the cardiologist every six months. Three years ago, she started getting short of breath during gymnastics. Tests showed she had a subaortic membrane, tissue blocking blood flow out of the heart that required surgery to correct. Some day Natalia may need to have her aorta replaced.

"I'm never going to get a good night's sleep," Roe said. "At night I watch her breathe."

Natalia and her family participate in the Start! Heart Walk and Jump Rope For Heart because donations fund lifesaving research. "We try and raise as much money as we possibly can," Roe said. "The surgeon told us that if Natalia had been born with this 20 years ago that she wouldn't have survived. Medical advances made her life possible. Thanks to doctors, surgeons and the American Heart Association, we are blessed to have her with us today."
